Why doesn't the Corsicana Independent School District have a girl's sports program in the middle schools and a basketball program in the high school? It seems that they are in violation of Title IX, which says that there is to be equal opportunity for sports for both sexes by July 2, 1978.

Administrators have been working on a revamped sports program to provide the opportunities you mention according to interest expressed by students, according to School Supt. Mark Culwell.

As your question notes, the district is not in violation of Title IX, since it does not go into effect until more than a year from now.

"We do intend to provide sports activities for everyone," Culwell said. "We will provide these activities as the interest demands."

Culwell said that next fall's high school schedule will contain at least one — and possibly more — new courses for girls. One of the strong possibilities is a volleyball team, with other selections depending on which area students express interest in participating.

I was recently hospitalized at Memorial Hospital. I carry supplemental income insurance, which pays a certain amount a week as my personal income when I am unable to work because of illness. Now, the hospital refuses to sign my insurance forms unless I sign this money over to them. The insurance company refuses to pay unless the hospital's insurance clerk signs the forms. Since I owe the hospital less than $100, and since this is a supplemental income insurance policy rather than a hospitalization policy, this hardly seems right. Is there anything I can do? (If the policy is paid direct to the hospital, I can't deduct the money as medical expense on my income tax, so I'm really being penalized twice if I do this.)

Memorial Hospital Business Mgr. Richard Harwell says that if you pay the balance of your bill, whatever, the amount, they will sign the forms. Otherwise, he says, they won't sign unless you assign benefits to them. This is standard practice in all cases, he says.

If you have money coming from that policy beyond what is needed to pay the remainder of your bill, then the hospital will refund the other portion to you Harwell said.

The State Board of Insurance in Austin said that there are no laws dealing specifically with the assigning of benefits, and that the problem is apparently between you and the hospital rather than you and the insurance company.

However, they also said that if you have assigned your hospitalization insurance over to the hospital, and are concerned only about the supplemental income policy, then they will attempt to intercede between you and your insurance company to see if that company will accept the hospital state ment as proof that you were, indeed, hospitalized.

If the company agrees, then the supplemental income insurance will be paid to you directly.

The State Board is forwarding to Action Line the forms you need to fill out to get help from them. We will forward those to you when they arrive.

On Dec. 17th, I had a repairman from Lone Star Gas Co. come out to fix my washing machine, which I purchased from the gas company. They told me it needed a part they didn't have, and they would order it. When the part came, the serviceman returned on Jan. 12th to fix the machine. I was charged for two service calls just because they were out of the part. Is this fair for them to charge me twice?

Lone Star Gas Regional Mgr. Lawrence Janecka, explained the breakdown of charges made to you for repairing your washer.

Each time the gas company makes a service call of this type, there is a $16 charge for the first visit. That charge includes travel, charge for diagnosis of the problem, and up to one hour of labor. If the serviceman has to stay longer than an hour, you are then charged additionally for each 15 minutes of time.

On subsequent calls, such as when they repaired your machine, you are charged only for labor in 15-minute increments.

As it happened in your case, it took the repairman an hour to replace the sediment tube which had gone out on your machine. You were charged for the hour's labor it took to replace that part.

Janecka said these rates are on file with the city, and are standardized for every Lone Star Gas Co. office in the state.

I am a partial invalid, and often I need special items around the house to help me with day to day living. Is there any place which sells cooking utensils and other household items especially designed for the handicapped?

Yes. A New Jersey company has a catalog of specially designed household items ranging from clothing and non-slip cookware to special doorknobs designed to aid the handicapped and elderly with their daily routines.

Fashion Able, Rocky Hill, New Jersey, 08553, will send you a free catalog listing such items if you will write them. Most are reasonably priced and they stock a wide variety of specialty items especially designed for people who cannot use normal products.

More questions are raised on use of county equipment

By PETE THADDEUS
Staff Writer

An Action Line received by the Daily Sun asked if it was legal for County Commissioner Billy Hargrove to attend the Corsicana livestock auction on Tuesday in his county pickup. A Sun reporter confirmed Hargrove's presence at the auction.

Thursday Hargrove said he was not buying or selling at the auction.

"I'd just left Tom White's Chevrolet place and I just stopped in to drink a cup of coffee and talk to people. I'd gone by the Chevrolet place about some auto parts. I don't do any of that buying or selling. If I had, I'd have been in my personal pickup," Hargrove said.

Hargrove explained that is a common practice with him to stop and drink coffee and "talk to folks" several times a day.

"SOMETIMES I STOP in Blooming Grove or Frost or Roy's Cafe and talk to people to see what's on their mind. They tell me what they think about the county business. I don't have to bring it up, they do that themselves."

He added that two or three times a month he uses his own pickup while he's doing county business. "I think it equalizes out," he said.

According to County Judge Rob Dunn, there is no existing policy regarding the use of county equipment.

"I would rather leave it up to the individual discretion of the commissioners," Dunn says.

Hargrove said that he does not let his crew perform work on private property unless it is soil conservation.

"They only do that soil conservation work if a private business won't do the work. In my precinct they are two men that own maintainers. Their work pretty well eliminates us from doing that kind of stuff," Hargrove said.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY Pat Batchelor says he assumes that the use of county equipment on private property is illegal, but adds that he has not briefed that point of law.

Batchelor said he is sure that the opinion issued by Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade is based on existing state law. Wade's opinion stated that, "There is no authority for the county to perform work on private property for a private person or entity and any such work would be illegal."

Commissioner R. J. Henderson said Thursday that he "abides by the law" in any situation regarding the private use of county equipment.

However, he agrees with Hargrove on the subject of soil conservation if no private contractor can or will do the work. He adds that in those cases the county should charge the same price as the contractor.

Dunn, Hargrove and Henderson all agree that common sense has to be used.

"IF YOU'VE GOT a mud hole filled with water in the middle of a county road you have to drain the water off the road," Henderson says and adds that if it is all right with the property owner he would go on private property to drain the water off the road.

Hargrove says that if he's driving down the road and sees a man in his pickup stuck in the mud he would hitch his county truck up and pull the man out.

All three men used the same example regarding the smoothing out of private drives.

"If someone has a ten foot driveway that needs smoothing out," Dunn says, "I don't think it's right that they would have to go to the expense of hiring a private contractor to come out and do 45 seconds of work. It would be easy for a county grader that was going down the road to pull in and do the work."

DUNN DOES NOT view the issue as a "yes or no situation." He also does not intend to bring the subject up when the commissioner's court meets.

"If they want to bring it up at commissioners court that's fine with me," he said.

The consensus of the county view point seems to be that if they are supposed to be helping people in the county, the commissioners should do all they can with out undercutting local businesses.

Henderson's viewpoint is shared by the majority of the commissioners. "If you can help the people, you ought to."

'Best school in the district'

Hicks proud of Drane changes

By RICHARD COLE
Staff Writer

After years of criticism and second-hand treatment, Drane Middle school has finally come into its own, says Principal Bill Hicks, and he is determined to see that the so-called "Drane Stigma" stays buried.

"We have the best school in the district," he said in an interview Friday. "There's a lot of pride among our students and teachers. They think we have the best school, and so do I."

To residents long acquainted with the traditional view that Drane was a second class facility, those statements may seem strange. To those who know Bill Hicks, and have seen his campus operate this year, the statements probably seem both natural and true.

Hicks was named principal of the campus last month, after serving for several years as assistant principal under Curtis Jones. Since Jones' illness last year, Hicks has served as acting principal.

He officially assumes the title during the first year following a controversial decision by school trustees to shift all sixth and seventh grade classes to Drane, leaving the more popular Collins Middle School campus with eighth grade classes only.

THAT DECISION WAS BITTERLY OPPOSED by many residents in the community who felt that Drane was a second rate facility, apparently better suited for other people's kids.

"I have the best teachers in the district; I couldn't ask for any better," he said, "and that's the most important thing in any school. I don't think I have a teacher here who is not trying to improve, no matter how good they already are. And if they know they have a deficiency in some area, they work especially hard to improve on that."

Sitting in his office, it is not hard to see where much of the new Drane pride originates. Between classes, students — alone and in groups — troop in to show off their new clothes, to mention a problem, or just to say "hi." And Hicks listens, greets each, shows an interest. Teachers and staff follow a similar pattern, stopping in to pass along information or just to chat briefly before the next class.

"OUR DISCIPLINE THIS YEAR is the best it's ever been," Hicks concedes. "I respect my students and teachers, and I think they respect me. We have rules, and we're very even in how we enforce these rules. If a student violates one of these rules, then he or she knows, and is certain, that the punishment will follow."

He has hardly spoken these words when a teacher brings in a student caught for a minor infraction. Hicks listens, then tells the teacher to proceed with disciplinary action as she sees fit. That student, although it made absolutely no difference, is Hicks' daughter.

He concedes that his discipline practices have not been without controversy in themselves.

"There are some who might say we're too arbitrary in the discipline areas," he said, "but I don't see it that way. Our students know that if they do certain things they will receive certain punishment."

One controversial discipline switch was the new requirement that there be no talking by students while they eat. Although this rule applies only to about 15 minutes of the 45 to 55 minute lunch period, Hicks says he has received much pressure about the move.

"THIS PARTICULAR RULE has been very controversial," he acknowledged, "but only from people who didn't try and eat in there under the old system. It had gotten to the point where adults wouldn't even try to eat in that cafeteria."

Students are allowed to talk quietly as they wait in line for lunch, but once they get their food to the table they are required to eat in silence.

"What a lot of people don't realize is that the kids have about 40 minutes of their lunch period to play outside. They can talk, scream, or holler all they want out on the playground, but that 10 to 15 minute period where they are actually eating is quiet time."

And Hicks said he has resisted pressure to alter that because he believes in it.

"It's a very nice atmosphere in there now," he noted. "It took a while for the students to get accustomed to it, but I'll say that a poll of our students would show that at least half or more actually enjoy the quiet as they eat. It gives them time to eat and it gives them some time to think."

ANOTHER CAFETERIA CHANGE is that students are now responsible for the mess they make, with rags stationed on each end of the tables to wipe away the crumbs after they finish. Students who fail to live up to this responsibility usually find themselves missing out on the playground fun in order to clean an extra table or two.

But it's not always all work and no play at Drane this year, Hicks says. The number of special assemblies and programs has increased, with programs produced by the students themselves as well as outside entertainers being brought in for special assemblies.

"We have every type of program we can for our kids," he said. "And I'll tell you something, we haven't had one discipline problem in that auditorium this year. I told our kids at the first of the year that these type programs depended on their behaving properly in the auditorium. They know where they stand and they know what to expect if they don't carry their half the bargain."

Such programs, Hicks said, have helped overall discipline at the school. Another step taken to help discipline in the classroom was the elimination of "phase 5", or remedial, classes.

WE'VE JUST BEGUN THAT this year," he explained. "We still have high achievement classes, but we don't put a tag on a student anymore saying, 'you're a phase 5 low achiever.'"

Kids learn from the teacher, but they also learn from one another and if you put all the slower students into one

FBI doubts kidnaping

By PETE THADDEUS
Staff Writer

The FBI announced late Tuesday afternoon that they do not believe Blooming Grove Army 1st Lt. Don Patterson's kidnap story.

FBI spokesman Frank Perone said, "Following our interview with Lt. Patterson, the FBI has determined that he was not kidnaped. The results of the FBI investigation have been turned over to military authorities."

A spokesman for Patterson's family in Blooming Grove said there was no one available for comment Wednesday morning.

SUMNER WILSON, Public Information officer at Ft. Ord, California said the Army would have no comment until after a meeting of military investigators Wednesday morning.

Patterson was found around 2 a.m. California time Tuesday by a game warden near Ft. Ord. In a phone call to his parents Tuesday the 26-year-old officer told them he was tired, but in good health.

His mother, Mrs. G.W. Patterson, said Tuesday that her son had been living on "bread and water" the whole time he was missing.

"He sounded tired but all right," his sister Janet Gillian said.

"He told us he had lost some weight and grown a beard," Mrs. Patterson said.

PATTERSON TOLD his family that he was abducted as he was driving to a movie at Ft. Ord around 7:30 p.m. Feb. 28 when a man flagged him down and said his father had had a heart attack and needed assistance. According to Mrs. Patterson, when her son got out of his car to help he was knocked unconscious.

The officer told his parents that he had been kept in a bathroom the whole time he was held captive.

"He said he never knew if it was day or night," Mrs. Patterson said, "he told us they had taken his watch away."

Mrs. Patterson said her son believed there were four people in the group that abducted him, as a protest of past U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war, but he never saw more than two at a time.

"That's so ridiculous," Mrs. Patterson said and added that she felt everyone realized the war had been wrong.

The FBI was called in on the case after a letter, supposedly from the protest group, was received by Maj. Gen. Robert Kirwan, commanding officer at Ft. Ord.

MRS. PATTERSON SAID the FBI told her the letter demanded that the U.S. admit its faults by being in Vietnam. She added the letter said, "We've got something you want. If we don't get it (the admission) Patterson will wish he was dead like my brother wished he was dead when he was a POW 10 years ago."

Patterson's father said the letter also contained "a lot of curse words and bad language."

Patterson explained to his parents that publicity about his disappearance alarmed his captors and that's why he was released.

"He told us that when they heard the FBI was on the case they got scared and decided to release him," Mrs. Patterson said. She added that when he was released his captors returned his watch.

classroom, they have no peers to learn from."

Next year's language arts classes at Drane will also be unique to the district, he noted. The old traditional concept of one class for reading, spelling, and grammar will vanish, replaced by two classes, each an hour long. One period of the day will be reserved for grammar, with the second reserved for reading. Spelling will be a part of both courses.

"This concept comes directly from our English teachers," Hicks said, "and so far as I know, we will be the only campus to do this. But up until now, language arts has just been skimmed over. Our kids will be doing a lot more writing, a lot more expressing themselves."

The switch will be only at the sixth grade level initially, he explained, with the seventh grade following if the program works as well as is anticipated.

A 17-YEAR VETERAN EDUCATOR, Hicks also had some observations concerning today's student.

"I don't know that students today are all that different than in the past," he said, "except that more students go to school a lot longer than they used to. And that they are much more sophisticated in what they know today; much broader in their knowledge. We've got kids in science that know things in middle school today that kids 20 years ago didn't even dream about."

Hicks points proudly to several programs which are bringing his students together more and more, passing along the credit to his faculty.

"We started a pep squad this year," he points out. "We had some pretty stiff grade and citizenship requirements going in, and we started with 20 girls. It didn't take it long until we added another 30 girls into the program; more than doubled it. They performed at our football games, did routines, the whole thing. They really work at it, and I understand that there may be a similar group over at Collins next year."

CHERYL DENSON
...in Dallas play

Cheryl Denson has Dallas theater role

Corsicana native Cheryl Denson is playing Miss Tweed, an amateur sleuth, in the current Dallas Theater Center production, "Something's Afoot."

The show, which is a musical murder mystery, contains eleven songs. The book, music and lyrics are by James McDonald, Davis Vos and Robert Gerald. "Something's Afoot" will run through April 2.

Miss Denson received rave reviews in the Dallas press when the production opened Feb. 22. She is a member of the Center's resident company and is a designer as well as an actress.

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G.T. Denson, 2023 West First Ave., Corsicana, she is a graduate of Corsicana High School and Baylor University.

As a resident member of the professional company, she has performed many leading roles at the Dallas Theater Center, including Liz in the recent premiere of "Ladyhouse Blues," Maudie in "My Drinking Cousin" and Puppy in "Puppy Doesn't Live Here Any More."

She has appeared in numerous other plays and has designed costumes for Theater Center productions of "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of Four," "Once in a Lifetime," "John Brown's Body," "Faces of U.S.," and "Fuse."

Retreat man claims ordinances seem to be aimed at him

By GARY EDMONDSON
City Editor

RETREAT — W.A. Poe accused Retreat officials last night with drawing up ordinances to harass him, while Mayor Cullen Dunn said that Poe has "never abided by what the other people want to do out here" and has "always been in left field."

Poe appeared at Tuesday's board of aldermen meeting after previously refusing to accept registered letters from the law firm representing the city of Retreat in regard to alleged zoning violations.

POE SAID HE refused to accept the letters because "Everybody knows where I live," adding that those with complaints about his actions could come and talk to him personally.

Saying that, "It seems like every ordinance is drawn up against me," Poe said that not long after he moved a mobile home onto his property, the city passed an ordinance forbidding mobile homes within the city limits.

Dunn replied that the officials "passed these ordinances ... to protect the homes of other people who live out here." He said the aldermen voted not to have any trailer houses in Retreat and that Poe moved his in violation of the ordinance. Alderman J.Q. Harrison also accused Poe of moving in two old homes in violation of Retreat ordinances. Harrison said that Poe had moved in three homes while having only one permit.

Poe agreed to this, but said the homes were comparable in quality to other homes in Retreat.

THIS ARGUMENT was rebuked on the grounds that those other homes had been in Retreat for more than 40 years.

Harrison and Dunn also accused Poe of doing some harassing himself. And Poe agreed that he had told them that his reasons for moving the mobile home in were to either sell the home or use it in moving himself and to "bug (T.P.) Penney," another Retreat resident.

Dunn, whose term expires this month, told Poe that he would leave it up to the next mayor and aldermen to decide what to do with the case.

Dunn started several other times to address Poe on the matter, but declined to when told the remarks could not be treated as "off the record." When the meeting adjourned, he told Poe, "We'll see you in court next semester."

Corsicana woman accidentally shot

A 44-year-old Corsicana woman is in satisfactory condition in Memorial Hospital Wednesday morning with a gunshot wound in the chest.

Georgia Mae Williams, Southpark Gardens Apt. 158, told police that she and a friend were cleaning her apartment around 11:30 Tuesday night when a .22 caliber pistol fell off a table and discharged. According to the police report, Mrs. Williams moved the gun from under her bed to a table. When she and a friend moved the table, the gun slipped off and fired with the bullet striking her in the chest.

Investigating police have determined that the shooting was accidental.

Learning through play

Lincoln's kindergarten helps build foundation

By SYLVIA A. WATERS
School Editor

Kindergarten at Lincoln Elementary School provides the foundation for what boys and girls will learn in their later educational development.

Mrs. Margaret Kloecker, a kindergarten teacher, says that in addition to educational development, kindergarten is often the first step in social development for the children.

She says that kindergarten provides the introduction to reading, writing, and math.

"We begin by teaching the recognition of letters, the alphabet and later progress to spelling and reading. The students then are introduced to numbers," she said.

Her students are also introduced to other subjects that include history, science and English on a simplified level.

They do classroom exercises on colors, shapes, telling time, how to write their names and addresses and learn the seasons of the year.

They are studying careers on a modified level. "We don't go into details about different careers, but we study the types of careers that are open and what the person in a particular job career does," she said.

To supplement what the students have learned in class, Mrs. Kloecker takes them on field trips. In the past they have toured the bakery and the Government Center. They will visit the Dallas Zoo later this semester.

In addition to the educational program, the kindergarten class also includes an exercise session which helps to develop the student's coordination.

I.O.O.F. Home has ups and downs in long history

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the second of two articles written by Dr. Jerry D. Turner, English instructor at Navarro College and former social services assistant at the I.O.O.F. Home in Corsicana. A Texas Historical Marker has been approved for the children's home, and the following story contains portions of the material submitted to the Texas Historical Commission.

By JERRY D. TURNER

An activity center for the campus of the Odd Fellow and Rebekah Children's Home in Corsicana was provided in 1911 with the completion of the auditorium building.

This structure, located east of the school, in direct line with the other major buildings, opened a host of facilities for the nearly 300 residents in the home at that time.

The ground floor consisted of a large tiled indoor swimming pool (officially referred to as the natatorium and dubbed "the nat" by the students of that day), a gymnasium and dressing rooms and showers. The main floor was dominated by a sizeable auditorium, complete with state and dressing rooms. The auditorium was ornately decorated, with carved stone work around the ceiling and proscenium arch, and is still considered today to be of considerable architectural interest.

IN ADDITION TO the auditorium proper, the upper floors also contained a number of rooms for music instruction and practice, and library and reading room. For years to come this building would be the center of activities for the fine arts department, sponsored by the Rebekah lodges (the women's branch of Odd Fellowship), which offered instruction in speech, drama, dance and vocal and instrumental music.

A resident of the home in the later 1920's and early 30's aptly summarized the importance of this building by recalling that there was always something happening there, at any time of the day.

The auditorium was the scene of the home's religious services, of weekly movies for many years and of programs, plays and concerts performed by the students. This building was the home of the band, chorus and orchestra, which performed at competitions and programs throughout the state, as well as in other parts of the county, and of the home's athletic teams, including its championship football teams.

TODAY, THIS STRUCTURE, renamed the Abel Rice Auditorium in honor of the donor who financed its remodeling in 1951, is little used in comparison to its earlier activity, but is still a dominant feature of the campus panorama.

These many uses which were made of the auditorium building are a good indicator of the size and complexity to which the institution had grown by this time. As of Jan. 1, 1912, there were 276 residents in the home, and by the mid 1920's this number would reach nearly 400.

The school employed nine full-time teachers and a principal. The home had two boys' bands, financed by the Patriarchs Militant branch of the Odd Fellows order, and 42 other students enrolled in music instruction. The school and fine arts department continued to grow the following two decades, as enrollment climbed and the state educational standards were raised.

As the school developed, many new departments were added and augmented to meet the needs of the students and the requirements for accreditation. Business, domestic science and manual arts departments were added, with the boys enrolled in the last of these assuming more and more responsibility for the maintenance of the home's physical plant.

A SCIENCE LABORATORY was added, the library greatly improved and foreign languages offered in the school. The boys' band, girls' orchestra and glee club and chorus grew in size and proficiency as the quality of instruction and of the available instruments improved. Certainly one high point in the history of the Widows and Orphans Home Boys' Band came on Dec. 28, 1925, when John Philip Sousa visited Corsicana and personally met the members of the I.O.O.F. Home and State Home bands.

Athletics, always an important part of the Home's program, reached a peak in the 1930's, when the girls' basketball team won county championships several years, and the Lynx, the home's football team, won Class B district championships in 1931 and 1932, the team's first two years of membership in the University Interscholastic League.

On through the 1930's and early 1940's the teams consistently turned in good win records, with occasional undefeated seasons. I.O.O.F. home football games, throughout this period, always attracted large crowds from the town, and one of the most anticipated and well attended sporting events in Corsicana each year was the game between the I.O.O.F. Home and the State Home.

ONE OVERALL indicator of the quality of the educational and athletic programs at the home is the number of graduates who have gone on to successful college careers, many of them assisted by I.O.O.F. scholarships and loans, and especially those who have then taken up careers in education and athletic coaching.

With the completion of the auditorium in 1911 and the old folks building in 1914, the major physical plant was completed in a way that was to change very little for more than 30 years. During that time, only one major structure was added, an administration building constructed in 1921.

This two-story square red brick building, placed slightly forward of the straight line of principal structures already completed, was undoubtedly intended, as an architect has recently commented, to stand out like an officer before the line of his assembled troops. This is certainly the impression created by panoramic photographs of the institution taken during the 1920's and 30's.

IN THE LATE 1930's and early 40's, as the membership of fraternal orders such as the Odd Fellows declined and as alternatives to placing orphans in institutions were made available, the enrollment of the home dropped sharply. In 1940, for the first time in nearly 40 years, the number of residents of the home dropped below 100; by the middle of the decade it was down to 39, and has never again reached 100.

The first major change which this decrease necessitated, spurred also by the increasing expenses and the growing shortages of the war years, was the closing of the home school in 1943.

At the beginning of the 1943-44 school year, the children from the I.O.O.F. Home began to attend the public schools in Corsicana, and the state funds which the home school has been receiving were paid to the Corsicana Independent School District. Only the home kindergarten for pre-school children remained in operation at this time and continued until 1949.

The fine arts department, which had always been operated separately from the school and funded by the Rebekah Assembly, continued in operation, although decreased enrollments ruled out the possibility of the orchestra and the boys' band. Speech, music and dance instruction, however, continued into the 1960's and only within the past few years has the fine arts program become limited to individual music lessons with independent instructors from the Corsicana community.

IN 1945, AT THE end of the war, the Grand Lodge, having for some time been aware of the outmoded and run-down condition of the buildings on campus, launched an extensive reconversion program to renovate and modernize the physical plant of the home. The first step in this program was the construction of new dormitories, extending east and west as one-story wings from the administration building.

These dormitories, completed in 1947, markedly altered the appearance of the campus and ever since have been the dominant feature of the home. These white, flat-roofed structures, stretching across nearly the entire front of the central campus, dominate the view and push the older red brick buildings into the background.

Also as part of the reconversion program, a new dining hall was constructed directly behind the administration building, in the same style as the dormitory wings. The material for the new dormitories was largely salvaged from the old school building, which was demolished at this time.

IN 1950 THE front of the old girls' dormitory was redesigned and the first floor remodeled to serve as a boys' dormitory. The boys, who had been moved into the old folks building when their three-story dormitory was closed, and then into one of the new wings of the main building, now moved into the building which would be their home for nearly 25 years. The second floor to this building was partially remodeled in 1959 to allow for the increasing number of boys in that time.

Also in 1950, a nursery cottage for the younger children was completed, funded by a special donation from San Antonio Lodge No. 11. This cottage, was designed in the same style as the dormitory wings and the dining hall — a one-story, flat roofed building in white painted brick. A large playroom was added to the "baby cottage," as it is known to the residents of the home, in 1961.

At about the time these buildings were being constructed, a number of the older structures on campus were being demolished or put to new uses. In 1952 the old three-story boys' dormitory, which had stood vacant for some years, was torn down, as was the old people's building. In 1951 the auditorium building was remodeled, eliminating the gymnasium, swimming pool and some of the practice rooms. The old dining hall and widows' building, which had not been used since the mid 1940's, was partially remodeled into three staff apartments in 1954. In 1975 the apartments were expanded and modernized.

DURING THE PAST three decades, as the value of the home property increased and the need for high farm production diminished, more than 100 acres of the original property have been sold. Some of this land has gone to provide land for major civic institutions.

The first of these transactions was the sale of approximately 47 acres to Navarro Junior College in 1948. Revenue from this sale was used to repay all indebtedness remaining from the home's reconversion program.

The following year, 25 acres were sold to Navarro County for the construction of the Navarro County Memorial Hospital.

Finally in 1968, 50 acres were sold to the Corsicana Independent School District for construction of the city's new high school.

THESE TRANSACTIONS not only helped clear the home of debt and increase its financial resources, but also insured the immediate availability to the home of educational and medical facilities. The present size of the home property is 179 acres, nearly all of which is in active use as campus, farm or pasture.

In 1962 the Grand Lodge voted to expand greatly the service of the home to the young people of Texas by accepting dependent and neglected children without Odd Fellow affiliation. Since that time, the I.O.O.F. Home has been working more and more closely with the courts, welfare offices, juvenile departments and other child-placing agencies to serve needy, non-delinquent children regardless of parental membership.

During the 90 years of its existence, the Odd Fellow and Rebekah Children's Home has served more than 5,500 persons.

Latest way to travel

A new motorized bus was purchased for the I.O.O.F. Home in the 1920's providing residents of the home with a convenient means of transportation.

Ennis asks SCS to repair old dam

ENNIS — The city of Ennis has made a formal request to the United States Soil Conservation Service to make needed repairs to the dam of historic Old City Lake.

City Secretary Mrs. Wynell Rose said the city recently received a letter from G.W. Gerald of the local Soil Conservation office which stated that the dam and lake may be under his office's jurisdiction.

MRS. ROSE said that the city sent a formal request in the form of a letter that the Soil Conservation Service repair the dam. She said if the project is undertaken by the Soil Conservation Service, the city will not have to pay anything.

The city of Ennis received word from the Texas Water Rights Commission several months ago that the dam would have to be repaired in order to meet state specifications, or the 90-year-old lake must be drained and filled in.

The state officials say that water is seeping from the dam, and that it may pose a potential threat to the residents living in the area in the event the dam broke.

A CONDITIONAL permit was $250,000. He said if the city is unable to obtain state or federal aid for the project, the city will be forced to either call a bond election or issue certificates of obligation to pay for repairing the dam to the 30-acre lake. Issued from the state agency giving the city two years to have the dam repaired. Mrs. Rose says repair work on the dam must be started within one year. City Manager Gerald Yarbrough said that repairing the dam could cost as much as

Corsicanans win ribbons

Mrs. Mary Venable and Harold Lasser received best of the division tri-color ribbons in the Central Texas Ceramics Association Annual Show held in Waco Convention Center Saturday and Sunday. Mrs. Venable showed a donkey planter and Lasser showed a Spanish cannon.

The two are students at Shir-Craft, 2214 Love Avenue. Mrs. Shirley Lasser, Shir-Craft manager, won five first place ribbons.

First place ribbons were also won by Mrs. Marge Jackson, Mrs. Erma Vaughn, Mrs. Mary Venable and Harold Lasser.

Mrs. Lasser also won four second place ribbons and a third place ribbon.

Mrs. Kay Burns and Mrs. Vaughn also took second place ribbons.

Robbie Lasser and Val McCormick received honorable mentions. Mrs. Lasser exhibited in the professional division.

Ballot places drawn

Charles I. Biltz drew for first place on the Corsicana Independent School District Board of Trustees election ballot Monday morning at the School Administration Building.

Other who will be listed accordingly on the ballot are Ed Blackburn, Gus Gappenberg, James (Buddy) Kirk, Dr. James G. Price, Albert B. Sanders, and John Kaatz.

The election will be held April 2 to fill three posts.

Volunteer Service started here

A new volunteer program to aid children and the elderly called Care Corps Volunteer Service for Texans has been formed by the local Department of Public Welfare.

Mrs. Sharon H. Frisco, volunteer coordinator, says that the goal of the volunteer program is to expand the range and quality of services provided the less fortunate members of the community.

"The department is looking for people who care enough to volunteer to help a child make it through school, or to drive an elderly person to a medical appointment, or just to call someone on the phone to let them know that someone cares," she said.

Music important part of students' development

The music program at Houston Elementary School provides students with an opportunity to develop an appreciation for all types of music and through the program, stresses patriotism.

Miss Jane Wilson, music teacher, instructs students in kindergarten through fifth grades.

"We try to give our students a variety of music exposure and at the same time stress music appreciation and patriotism," she said.

Her fifth grade students are currently studying a unit on black musicians and their accomplishments.

The program also includes a unit on square dancing, folk dancing, and musical instruments.

MISS WILSON notes that she does not grade her students on musical abilities. The students are graded according to their attitude and cooperation in class.

In her role as music teacher, Miss Wilson also develops the music for school programs, presented for the Houston Parent Teacher Association.

She says that the students' teachers select the content of the music program to be presented and she arranges the music.

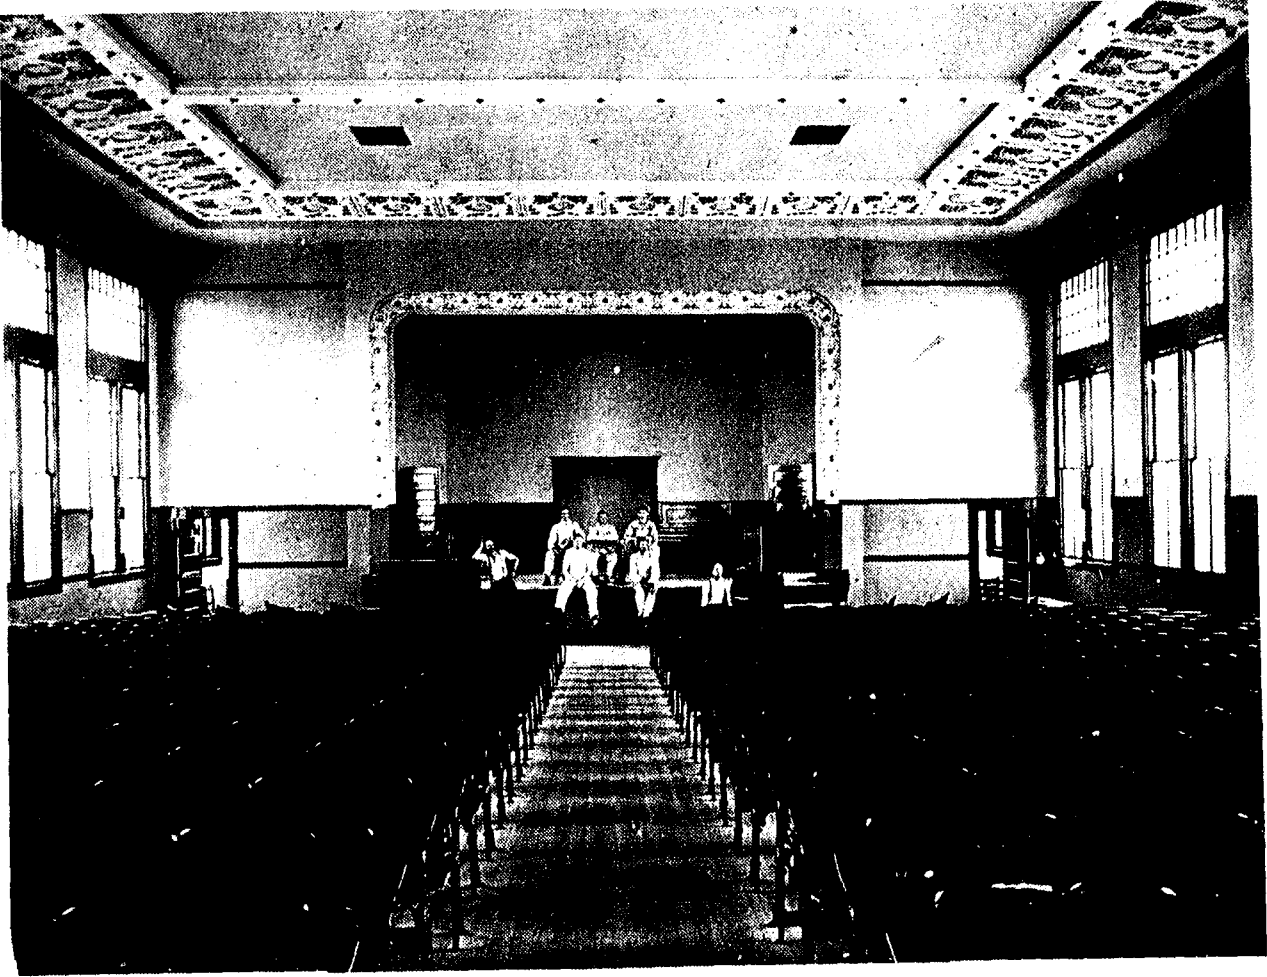

Miss Wilson, a former student at Houston, said she feels music is a very important part of the student's educational development.

She recalls that she was a music student of Mrs. Dorothy Murchison at Houston and that many of the things she learned in music and her development of music appreciation stem from Mrs. Murchison.

"IT'S REFRESHING to know that I can call her when I need advice in my music class," she said.

Miss Wilson says that many of her students develop a sense of accomplishment by taking part in music programs at the school.

"If the students can get up on stage and perform, they feel like they have accomplished something," she said.

Ornate auditorium

The auditorium building at the I.O.O.F. Home was completed in 1911, and is still standing today. The main floor was dominated by this auditorium, complete with stage and dressing rooms. The ground floor featured a large tiled indoor swimming pool which has since been filled in.
